

Addison Culver

Account Specialist

With a mission to serve her thriving community, Addison has carved out her niche in storytelling to foster intriguing and genuine brand identities.

Whether it's launching a social media campaign, or delving into market research, Addison's commitment to her craft is matched only by her genuine enthusiasm in helping brands flourish and forging lasting connections that leave a mark on hearts and businesses alike.

Earning a bachelor's in communication and journalism from Northern Kentucky University opened doors across the industry for Addison to gain experience in nonprofit settings serving local and national audiences. From healthcare and patient-driven initiatives to social services and charitable relief efforts, Addison connects diverse people and ideas to become a catalyst for growth and innovation.

A new transplant to Lancaster, Ohio, Addison has taken strides of involvement across town, including active membership in Lancaster-Sherman Rotary Club and Young Professionals of Fairfield County. She also serves on the Mission Committee and in a steering group for missional ministry at her church, First Presbyterian.

She resides in Lancaster with her husband, Will, and dog, Biscuit. In her free time, you can find Addison baking one of her delicious cheesecakes to share with friends and family, staying active in the gym, or expressing her creativity through writing.
