

Erin Taylor

Office and Accounting Manager, Executive Assistant to the CEO

Previously with the Robert K. Fox Family Y for the better part of a decade, Erin has tried her hand at a little of every job role before settling in on the administrative side of the office. She loves the behind-the-scenes aspect of making an office run smoothly and learning how to assist wherever there is a need and is honored to fulfill a small role in the important service Krile Communications provides to the community.

Volunteering has always been a special part of her life, whether helping at her children's schools, creating jewelry to donate for fundraisers, participating in the United Way Community Care Day, volunteering behind the scenes at Destination Downtown Lancaster, helping at Foundation Dinners, organizing food drives or assisting the Lazarus Committee at St. Bernadette Church. She even participated in the local YMCA's Dancing with the Lancaster Stars event, with some arm twisting, to help raise money for Partners with Youth, a program that helped children in the community enjoy the programming and safety of the Y without monetary issues being a hinderance. Her claim to fame was her trophy she received for raising the most money of all the contestants that year.

Erin resides in Lancaster with her husband of over 20 years, who is also her high school sweetheart, and their two children. She enjoys spending time with her family and their spoiled dog, visiting her daughter at college or cheering for her son at his high school sporting events. In her free time, she enjoys reading, gardening, painting, making jewelry, needle felting, embroidering and just learning how to craft new ways to be creative.
